

FADE IN:

INT. WHITE ROOM

ANNE-MARIE FITZALBERT and an INTERVIEWER sit facing each other in two white chairs at a wooden table. Based on their body language, it is clear that they do not know what is going on or what they should be doing.

ESTABLISHING SHOT OF BOTH:

INTERVIEWER

So, I guess we should start.

ANNE-MARIE

Yeah... that sounds like a good idea...

OVER THE SHOULDER:
(BACK AND FORTH)

INTERVIEWER

Okay, Anne-Marie – let's start at the beginning...

ANNE-MARIE

(cutting off Interviewer)
Who are we kidding, it's REBECCA.

INTERVIEWER

Umm... okay. Great. Cutting through the crap, and straight to the good stuff, eh?

ANNE-MARIE (AS REBECCA)

(slightly frustrated)
Yeah. I guess so. I wouldn't call it crap though...

INTERVIEWER

Never mind. It's not a big deal. Let's start over. So, Rebecca – tell us about Pragmatic Patient Practices.

(slightly flustered)
Yeah – okay. Well, Pragmatic Patient Practices is a company that creates therapeutic devices to assist ordinary people in their everyday struggles.

(beat)
We aim to find solutions, without labeling our clients and 'treating' them.

INTERVIEWER

But it isn't really doing that... is it? Pragmatic Patient Practices is a fake company, right? Your art practice...

ANNE-MARIE (AS REBECCA)

Well, yeah. Of course it is. What are we talking about here? Do you want to talk about my practice from the inside or the outside?

INTERVIEWER

I'm not really sure what that means. Could you explain that to us?

ANNE-MARIE (AS REBECCA)

Well, do you want to discuss the company, or the creation and ongoing performance of the company? There is a huge difference. For example, these products are really here, and there is a company website. That is what Pragmatic Patient Practices is – but my practice itself is something much larger – for example, you're not really an interviewer, you're a professional actor.

INTERVIEWER

I'm very sorry. I still don't quite understand. What do you mean, it's something much larger? I'm just a little confused where we are going with all of this, and where you stand in all of this...

I stand, where you stand. Or, sit, I guess...

INTERVIEWER

(looks confused)

ANNE-MARIE (AS REBECCA)

Well, we clearly aren't getting anywhere here, and I believe that the work speaks for itself. So, maybe we should leave these nice people to look around.
(to Interviewer)
Thanks Paul.

CUT TO SHOT OF BOTH:

INTERVIEWER (PAUL)

(awkwardly)
Yes, thank you...

Both Anne-Marie and the Interviewer walk off screen, Anne-Marie first, and then the Interviewer more slowly, picking up his 'transcript' as he goes.

FADE OUT.
